FLCCC Alliance Statement on the FDA’s Removal of Content Telling the Public to “Stop it” Regarding Taking Ivermectin to Prevent and Treat COVID-19

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The FDA has removed and replaced the page on their website about ivermectin and deleted social media posts that erroneously attempted to say that ivermectin was for horses and told the public to “stop it.”

“I am glad that the content is now gone, and we can put this behind us,” said Paul E. Marik, M.D., FCCM, FCCP, a plaintiff in the case, chairman and chief scientific officer of the FLCCC Alliance (FLCCC), and former Chief, Pulmonary and Critical Care Medicine at Eastern Virginia Medical School. “Unfortunately, the damage done by the FDA’s actions will continue to have a negative impact on public health for some time.”

On March 22, a settlement was reached in the Apter v. Dep’t. of Health and Human Services lawsuit. In the settlement, the FDA agreed to remove website and social media posts that make statements about using ivermectin for COVID-19.

The before and after website content changes can be found here:

The FLCCC filed its amicus brief supporting the lawsuit in February of 2023. A copy of the brief can be found here: <https://covid19criticalcare.com/wp-content/uploads/2023/02/FLCCC-Apter-v-HHS-Amicus-2-13-23-FINAL.pdf>

About the FLCCC Alliance

The FLCCC Alliance was organized in March 2020 by a group of highly published, world-renowned critical care physicians and scholars with the academic support of allied physicians worldwide. Known for its lifesaving protocols for preventing and treating COVID-19 in all stages of illness, including “Long COVID” and Post Vaccine Syndrome, the FLCCC has since developed treatment guides for several conditions and illnesses, including sepsis, metabolic disease, cancer, and depression.
